PERFORMANCE EVALUATION FORM

PURPOSE OF PERFORMANCE EVALUATION

Performance evaluation assists employees and employers to reach their goals. Such evaluations are intended to provide the employee and the supervisor with an opportunity to develop goals and objectives, to identify strengths, and to define training or improvement plans for areas requiring development. Completion of the performance evaluation form and discussion of ratings will facilitate communication and an understanding of expectations. It also provides a history of employee progress and development.

HOW TO CONDUCT A PERFORMANCE EVALUATION

- Schedule the meeting in advance, ideally with a few days notice to the employee. Allow sufficient time and avoid scheduling when either your or the employee is under a great deal of pressure.
- Select a private area where you can conduct the meeting.
- Complete the employee's performance review form prior to the meeting.
- Provide the employee with a copy of the performance review form and ask him/her to do a self-evaluation to facilitate discussion.
- During the review session, establish a non-threatening atmosphere. Prevent interruptions and give your full attention to the discussion. Be a good listener.
- During the review session, discuss with the employee his/her goals and ideas for improvement. Include in the review, the mutually agreed upon goals and a development plan.
- Comment on areas of strength and weakness as they relate to performance. Use examples of specific occurrences. During the review period, document examples of good and poor performance in a file for each employee. Use this file to provide examples at review time.
- State the purpose of the performance review. Be sure that employees understand the job content, responsibilities, work standards and how performance is measured. You may want the employee to review the job description before the performance review and discuss any potential changes during the performance review.
- Encourage active participation and open communication. Let the employee talk and contribute freely to the discussion.
- If the employee raises issues that are not relevant to his/her performance evaluation, return the focus back to the subject of performance. If you anticipate the review may be difficult to conduct, you may request HR be present during the meeting.
- Upon completion of the evaluation, please provide a copy to the employee, one for the Supervisor and the original to Human Resources to be kept in the employee's personnel file.
